By employing GPS and web based technologies, AFI clients have 24 hour access to case updates and expenses on any particular investigation enabling them to save up to 30% in productivity by reviewing cases in their own time, at their own pace and in any location. Our expert online researchers have excelled in the use of social media and other online database searches to maximize investigational techniques and results.

Case Example:

A young female had injured her ankle at a go-cart track and was now suing the track for a substantial amount of money, claiming her life would never be the same with her "catastrophic" injury. The insurance company contacted us with the request to conduct surveillance with the obvious intention of collecting evidence contrary to her claim. We conducted a research investigation using social media prior to actual surveillance. Through a social media website we had learned that she would be attending an upcoming wedding at a resort in the Dominican Republic. Two of our investigators attended the getaway wedding and obtained over 14 hours of the subject dancing, swimming, playing volleyball and any other activity the resort offered. The evidence had clearly disproven her claim that the injury was life altering. What it did illustrate however, are the advantages of what properly utilized technology can bring and the importance of staying in tune with best practices.

All of our reports are prepared by well experienced professional investigators and presented in a recorded format with still photos to accompany and support the documentation.

At AFI each investigation we commit to allows the client to monitor the progress through a login as well as in person with our well experienced operations manager at anytime. In addition, we are continuously monitoring and updating our strategies to ensure the greatest probability of success.
